

ABSTRACT

[0054] Disclosed is an image signal processor for use in an image processing system. The image signal processor includes a local memory to store data and a memory command handler having a plurality of memory address generators. Each memory address generator generates a memory address to the local memory and interprets a command to perform an operation on the data of the local memory located at the memory address to aid in image processing tasks.